

One Circle

Alone I am a dot, together we are Earth.

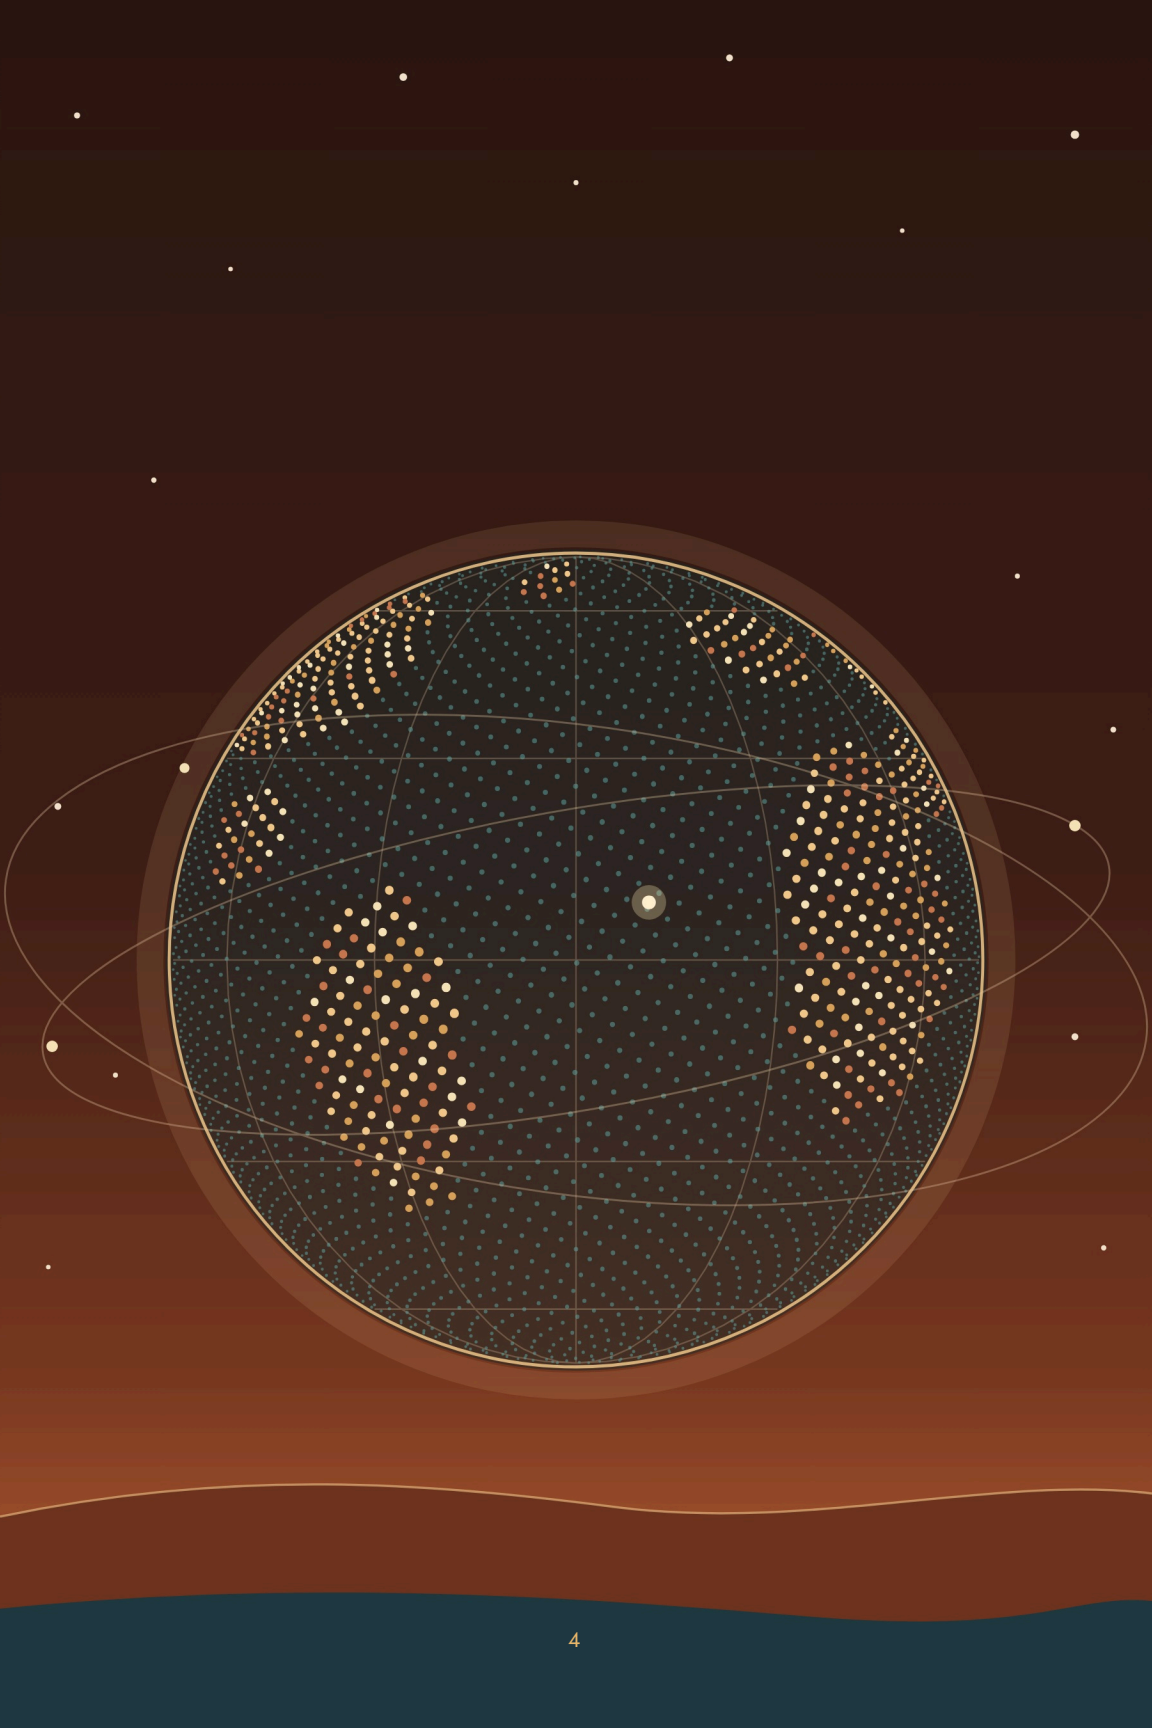

One Circle

Alone I am a dot, together we are Earth.

JAWAD YOUSOFI

*For the Earth,
and everyone on it.*

Alone I am a dot, together we are Earth.

ONE

Alone, I am a dot.

One small point of light, here for a little while.

I breathe, I wonder, I reach — and sometimes I feel like the only one.

TWO

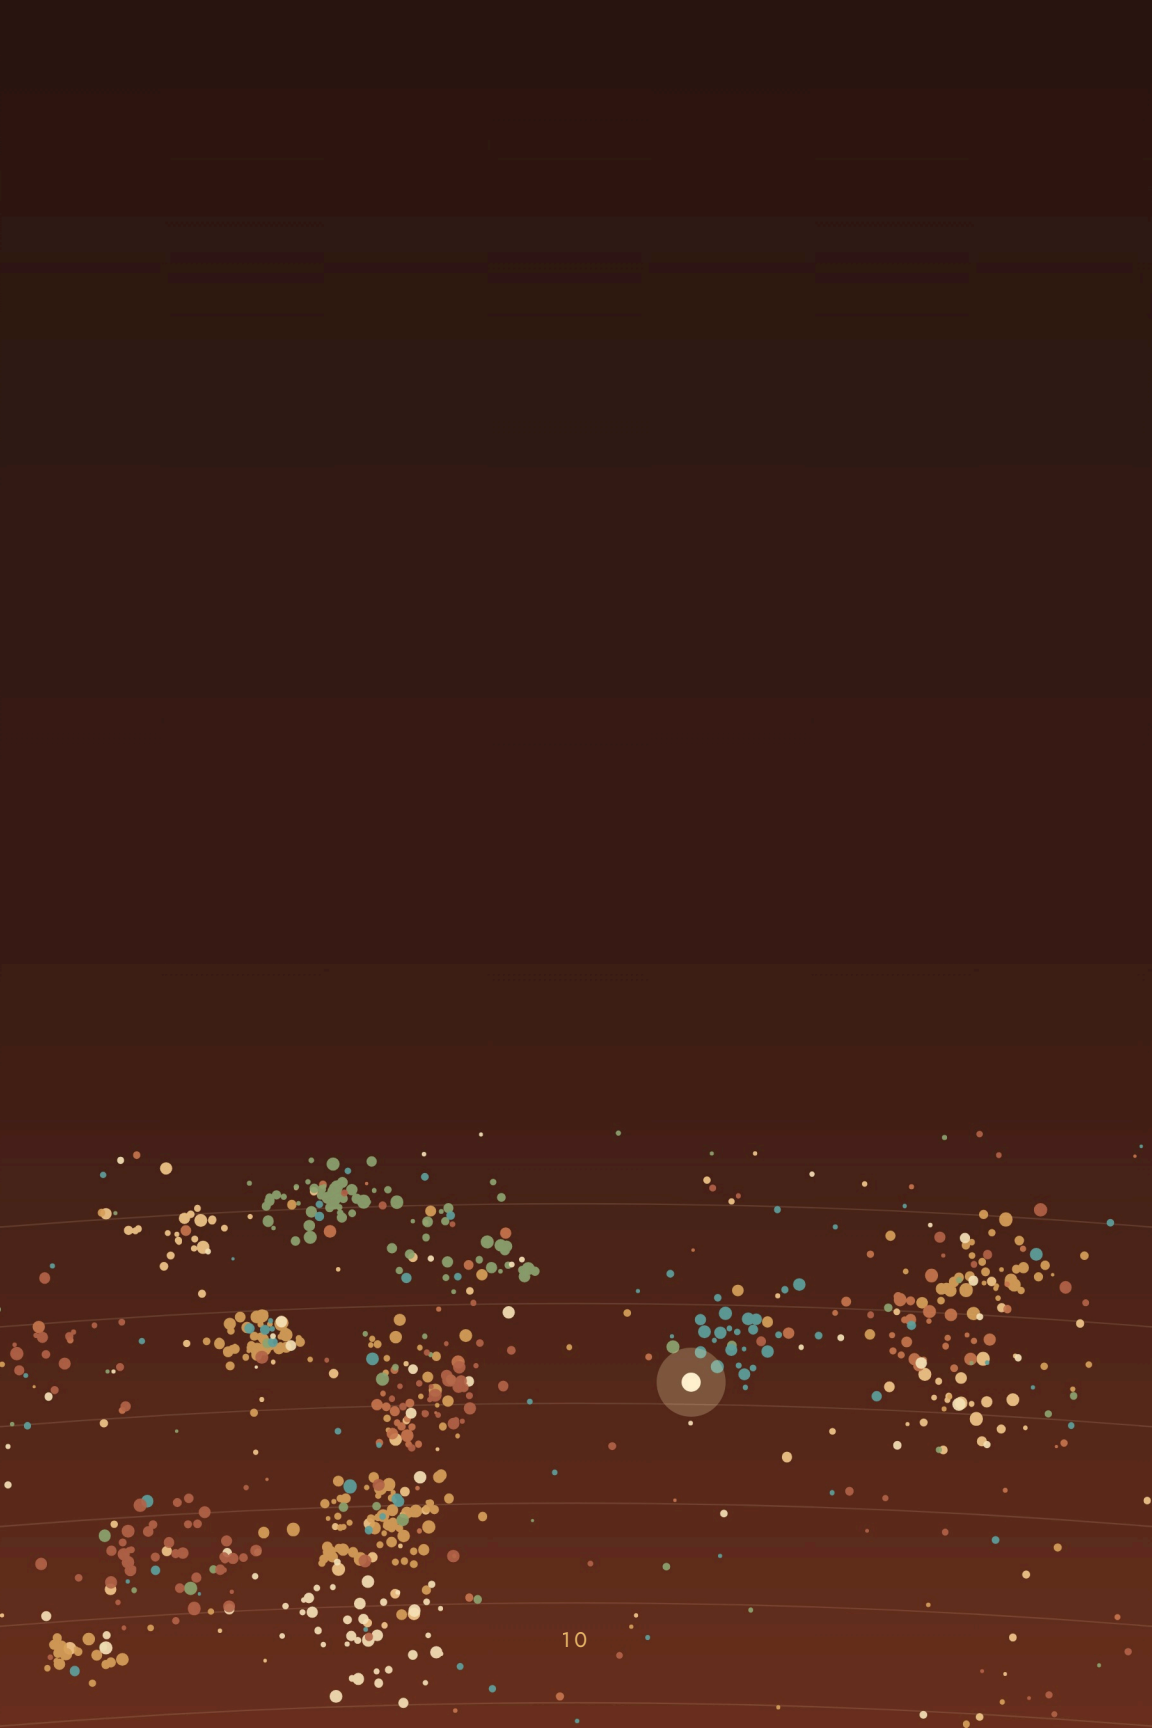

But look closer. I was never alone.

Another dot beside me. And another behind them.

The hands that grew my food. The voice that taught me words.

Strangers I'll never meet, who shaped the world I woke into.

More of us than I could ever count.

THREE

And no two of us the same.

Different colors, different names, different light.

We are born in different lands, under different skies.

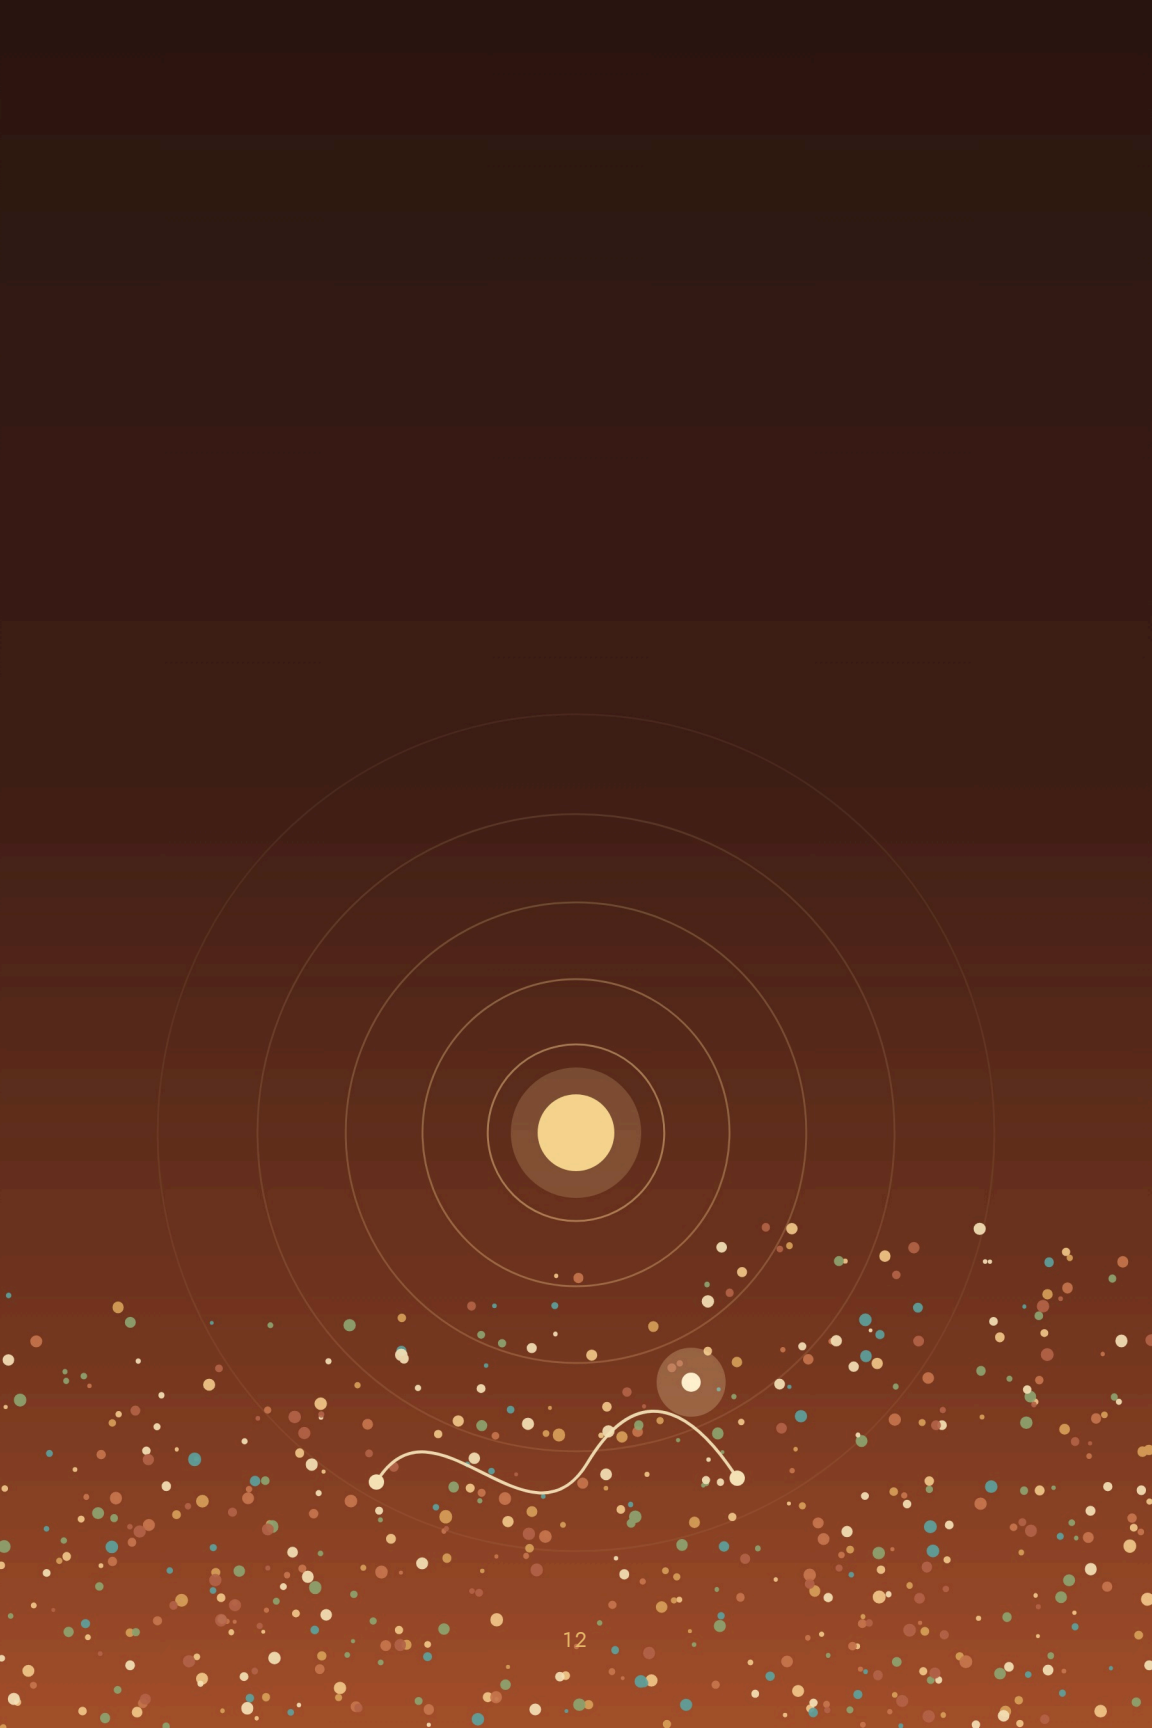

We speak in a thousand tongues, and pray in a thousand ways.

We love differently. We grieve differently. We dream in our own languages.

Some of us are loud, some quiet.

Some near, some so far we will never meet.

We disagree. We misunderstand. We see the same world and name it differently.

And still — look.

Every one of us wakes to the same sun.

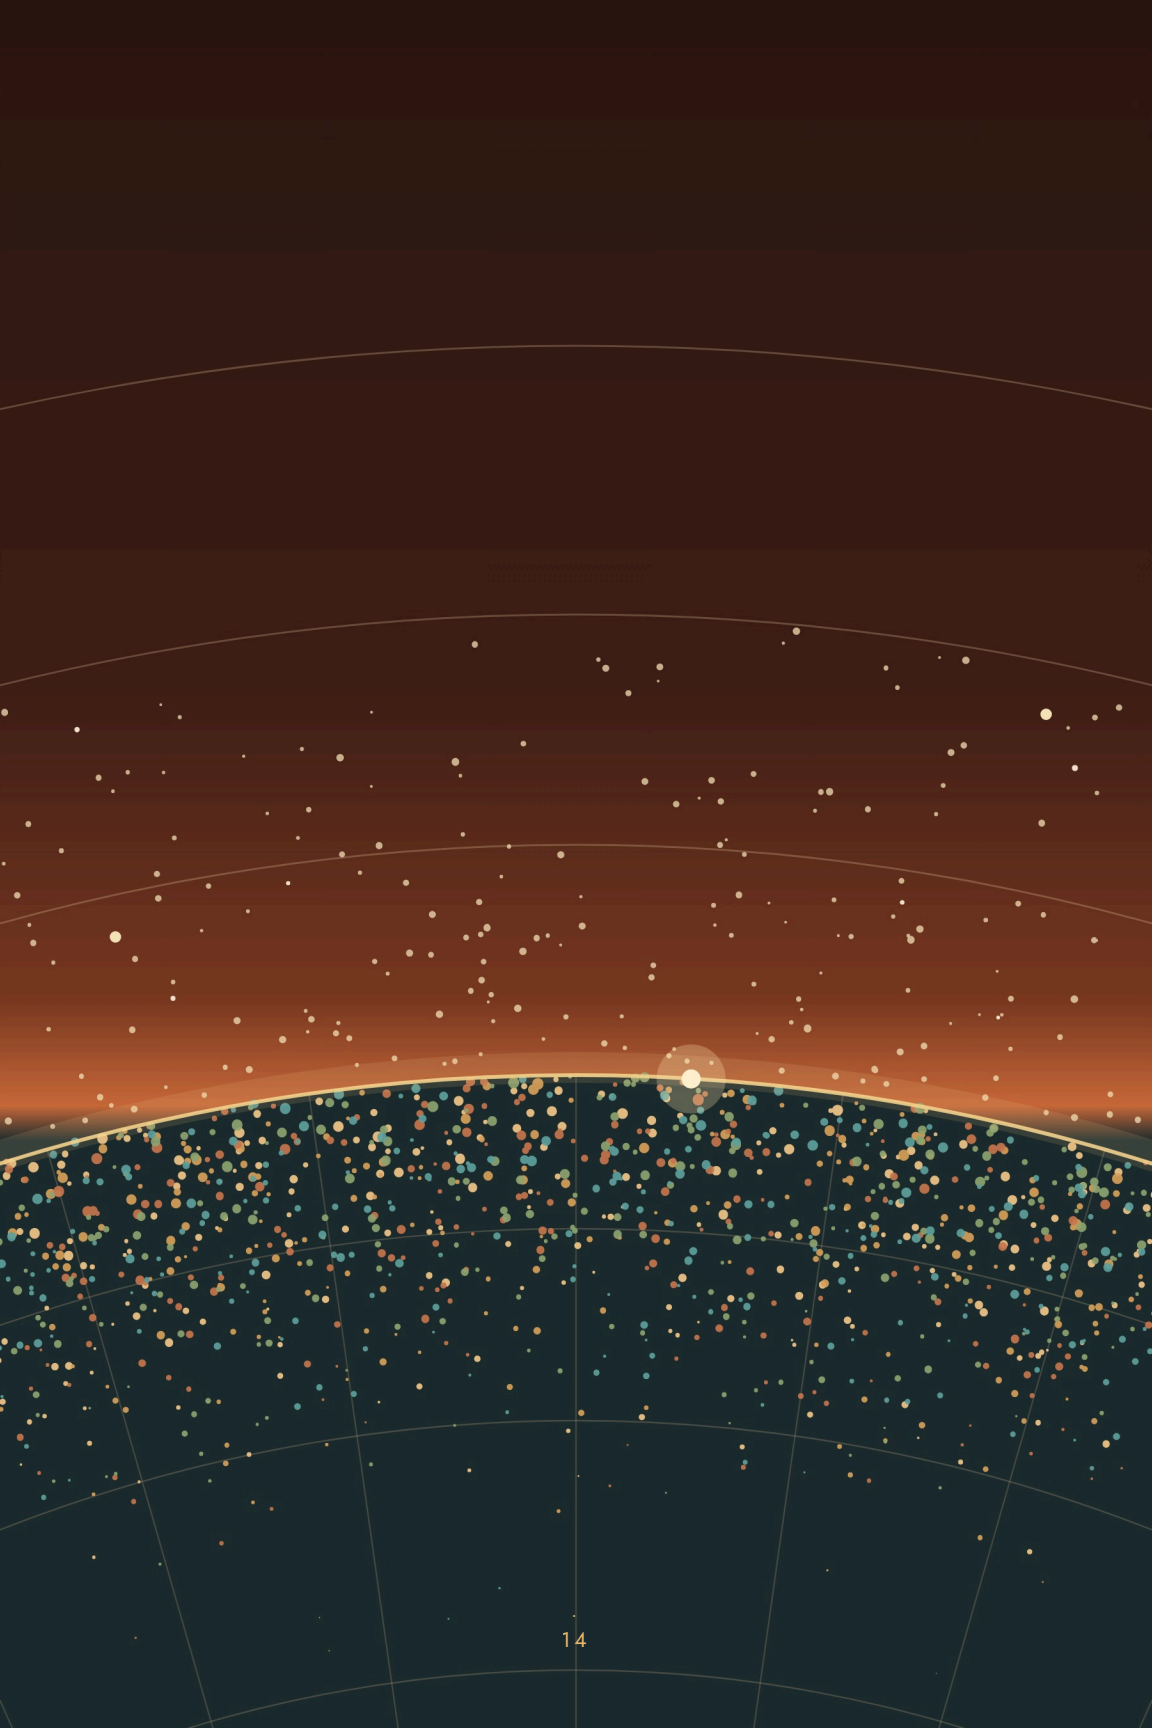

Every one of us breathes the same air, one person letting go of a breath another takes in.

Every one of us knows what it is to hope, to hurt, to hold someone we love.

This is not what divides us.

This is what fills the circle.

Our differences are not the cracks in the whole —
they are the many points of light that make the Earth glow.

FIVE

We are the Earth.

Every dot a person. Every person a place on the circle.

Your light and mine, held in the same turning world.

Alone, I am a dot.

Together, we are Earth.

FIND YOUR DOT

One small gold dot appears in every picture in this book.

That dot is you.

PAUSE

*Think of one person whose hands
touched your life today
without your ever knowing.
Thank them, quietly.*

THE HANDS THAT HELD YOU

Write the names of the people, near or far, who helped carry you here.

and the people around you.
